

PREFACE

My sources for the "Six Little Preludes," BWV Nos. 933-938, consist of an old Hoffmeister printing as well as the editions issued by Peters; the latter are based on the Forkel traditions. A number of older manuscripts from the Royal Library in Berlin are in essential agreement with the text, as authenticated by the above mentioned printed editions. These manuscripts consist of the following: P.528, 540, 542. The latter bears the designation: Graf Karl Lichnowski, Gottingen 1781. It is probable that the owner of this manuscript was in actual musical communication with Forkel. The manuscripts are only partially accurate in the matter of ornamentation. A copy of the C Major Praeludium appearing in P.563 is not reliable.

The other twelve preludes are to be found in the "Little Piano Book" ("Clavierbüchlein") of Wilhelm Friedemann Bach (1720) as numbers 1, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10 and 11. Unfortunately, years have passed since my cursory perusal of this manuscript. The other preludes appear in a manuscript of Kellner with which I am not familiar. I am, therefore, basing this edition on the carefully corrected text contained in the Peters Edition. Moreover, I have compared this with a copy of the "Clavierbüchlein" belonging to the Joachimsthal High School; the latter is certainly inaccurate in its notation of ornaments. It is interesting to note that some of the pieces in the "Clavierbüchlein" are entitled Praeambulum instead of Praeludium.
